VALENTINE PARTNERS, from Edna Geister's Ice-Breakers and the Ice-Breaker Herself (Entertainment)

For finding Valentine Partners, pin a number of red paper hearts on a sheet stretched between folding doors. The name of each man present is written on a heart. When the guests enter the room, each lady is given an arrow made of red paper which has a number on it. When all have arrived, the ladies, one by one, are blindfolded, and each one tries to pin her arrow on a heart on the sheet. Each girl must remember her number; and just before refreshments are served, each heart is taken off in turn together with the nearest arrow.

Hearts may be cut in two and matched to choose partners.
